Co-Occurring Disorders: Evidence Based Integrated Client Management Approaches

Program Summary

Research demonstrates that persons with co-occurring mental health and substance use disorders occur more often than not. Yet, our treatment approach is developed as if this is a rare circumstance.

To effectively treat persons with co-occurring disorders it is necessary to expect persons to have dual disorders and treat them in one location, by one person or team of persons, in a welcoming and hopeful approach.

For systems to achieve a high level of effective treatment for persons with co-occurring disorders a systems change effort is required. The Comprehensive, Continuous Integrated System of Care (CCISC, Minkoff and Cline) is the most widely known change strategy. Through this change activity, co-occurring capable and co-occurring advanced treatment can be developed.

Program Goals and Learning Outcomes:

This course takes a foundational look at the prevalence of co-occurring disorders, how risk is increased when both disorders co-occur and effective approaches for managing clients. We will also take a look at;

- Integrated treatment as a norm
- Definition of co-occurring tx
- CCISC as a model for Change
- Co-occurring capable and Co-occurring Advanced skills/ treatment
- Motivational Interventions

"Loved the webinar format! Great technology and ability to limit travel time, time away from family, etc. and still get great training."

"Personally I felt for the first time that this program was developed for the work that I do."

I was very impressed with the depth of knowledge the facilitators possessed about evidenced based best-practices in the industry. However, it wasn't an over-your-head kind of dissemination . . . very practical.

Your company provided an incredible opportunity for professional development and was laser focused around what other facilities are doing regarding reentry and reintegration based on statistical evidence based practices. I personally utilized this workshop from a vendor perspective to ensure the opportunities our company is pursuing in reentry and reform is in line with Best Practices and working towards Evidence Based Practices in the Correctional Industry. I was truly amazed by the detail and level of information your course provided. As a matter of fact, I would say that this was one of the best "hands on" educational programs I have ever attended, including many of the Masters level courses I attended in graduate school. I will be, and have already, STRONGLY recommended this course for our County, DOC, and international correctional customers and would even recommend this to other vendors of the corrections industry interested in providing reentry or rehabilitation services.

This was truly worthwhile and should be a mandatory course for Correctional Leaders everywhere.
